Andrew Bruce,

Congratulations on earning your Registered Health Information Technician (RHIT) credential. This credential distinguishes you as a leader in the health information industry. By earning the RHIT credential, you have successfully demonstrated your competence in and commitment to health information management (HIM). On behalf of the American Health Information Management Association (AHIMA), I'd like to welcome you to the professional HIM community.

AHIMA offers opportunities to connect with other RHIT and HIM professionals through events, continuing education, and electronic communities. We recommend joining AHIMA as a member, to take full advantage of the many opportunities and resources AHIMA has to offer. AHIMA membership has a new model with updated categories and now includes access to a variety of products worth 4-8 CEUs! Learn more about the new model and join today at <https://my.ahima.org/membership>. If you are currently a member, maintaining your AHIMA membership is beneficial in supporting you with continuing your professional development and advancement.

Now that you have earned your Registered Health Information Technician (RHIT) credential, please add the RHIT acronym to your professional correspondence and communications. To obtain a copy of your certificate please log into your CEU account at <https://my.ahima.org/login>.

Keeping your credential in an active status is important. Please ensure you are following the eligibility guidelines for the recertification process. For more information on the recertification process please refer to the Recertification Guide on the AHIMA website <https://my.ahima.org/certification/recertification>.

If you have questions about your certification or AHIMA membership, please contact AHIMA's Customer Relations Department at (800) 335-5535 or info@ahima.org.

Again, congratulations on earning your RHIT!

Sincerely,
